

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for preventing acrylamide formation in heat-treated food stuffs, in particular in the case of a food processing that involves a frying step and/or a cooking step, which method comprises blocking conversion of glycerol into acrylamide.